On the other hand, we de-nounce with righ-teous in-dig-na-tion and dis-like men who are so be-guiled and de-mo-r-al-ized by the charms of plea-sure of the mo-ment, so blind-ed by de-sire, that they can-not fore-see the pain and trou-ble that are bound to en-sue; and equal blame be-longs to those who fail in their du-ty through weak-ness of will, which is the same as say-ing through shrink-ing from toil and pain. Th-ese cas-es are per-fect-ly sim-ple and easy to distin-guish. In a free hour, when our pow-er of choice is un-tram-melled and when noth-ing pre-vents our be-ing able to do what we like best, ev-ery plea-sure is to be wel-comed and ev-ery pain avoid-ed. But in cer-tain cir-cum-s-tances and ow-ing to the claims of du-ty or the obli-ga-tions of busi-ness it will fre-quent-ly oc-cur that plea-sures have to be re-pu-di-at-ed and an-noy-ances ac-cept-ed. The wise man there-fore al-ways holds in th-ese mat-ters to this prin-ci-ple of se-lec-tion: he re-jects plea-sures to se-cure other greater plea-sures, or else he en-dures pains to avoid worse pains.
